Questions 7-11 refer to the following article, information, and text message.

1. Smoker's Expands Operations

By Sean Parsons

In 2003, Amelia Harrison met chef Paige Jarvis at a food festival in Tucson, Arizona. This fortunate encounter would eventually result in the creation of the largest barbecue sauce producer in Brazos County. Originally, Harrison was not involved in the recipe-making business at all. She was operating a small grill shop in New Orleans. However, she has always been a fan of quality barbecue, so she joined forces with Jarvis to create one of the country's favorite bottled sauces: Smoker's. In 2007, Harrison and Jarvis began hosting cooking contests, which have become the most popular attraction of barbecue festivals across the country. This boosted Smoker's success dramatically. They will be the hosts of the contest for the 25th Annual Mid-American Barbecue Convention, too. Today, Smoker's is moving to a bigger 3,600-square-foot location at 5831 San Felipe St. "We are absolutely thrilled about the move," Amelia Harrison said. "We hoped that this would happen eventually, but never dreamed it would come about so quickly."

2. 25th ANNUAL MID-AMERICAN BARBECUE CONVENTION

Owensboro, Kentucky
 Saturday, July 10-Sunday, July 11

The Annual Mid-American Barbecue Convention has returned! For two days, barbecue lovers can wander around our fair grounds, trying free samples of various foods and drinks served at each booth. On Saturday, a private convention will be held indoors for business owners and professionals to learn about various aspects of the barbecue industry while patrons enjoy the fair outside. On Sunday, everyone will be entertained by various events and performances on the main stage outside, including the highly anticipated cook-off competition.
